LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

from

THE SOUTH CAROLINA STATE LIBRARY BOARD

November 1, 1960

To His Excellency, the Honorable Ernest Frederick Hollings, Governor of South Carolina, and to the Honorable members of the General Assembly of South Carolina:

Dear Sirs:

We have the honor to transmit the report of the South Carolina State Library Board for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1960.

Herein are contained a report of the State Library Board's activities for the past year, a summary of public library progress in South Carolina, service statistics for each public library in the State, and a report of the program being carried on under the State Plan for the use of federal funds allotted to the State under the provisions of the Library Services Act of 1956.

The report shows clearly the increasing importance of the public library to the economic as well as to the cultural welfare of the community. That libraries may realize their full potential of service to the people of the State is the continuing goal of the State Library Board.

Respectfully submitted,

M. G. PATTON, Chairman

SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT SOUTH CAROLINA STATE LIBRARY BOARD

July 1, 1959-June 30, 1960

THE STATE LIBRARY BOARD

The State Library Association, known as the State Library Board, was created by the General Assembly in 1929 and charged with the responsibility of developing a system of public libraries to serve the entire state. Under this mandate, the State Library Board has developed a program designed to bring adequate public library service within the reach of all people of the state whether they live in urban or rural areas. Established to provide leadership and regulation for the total public library program in the state, the State Library Board fills an important role in the proper development and functioning of local public libraries. Gaps in library service are being closed and the continuous improvement of public libraries throughout the state is evident.

SERVICES OF THE STATE LIBRARY BOARD

The services of the State Library Board cover a wide range of activities and are of major importance in developing and improving public library service within the state. Among the functions performed by the State Library Board are the following:

Planning: As by law the State Library Board is a planning agency for the state program of public library service, planning is one of its most important functions. This planning involves the formulation of long-term policies and objectives; foresight and continuous planning determine in large measure the scope and quality of services which are provided by the public libraries throughout the state.

Research: The State Library Board obtains or conducts the necessary research for a state system of public libraries. Guess work can no longer be accepted as a basis for the determination of state-wide policies and plans. Intelligent planning for the development of the public library program must be based upon facts. Studies and surveys are an important part of the State Library Board's program for public library improvement.

Technical, information, and advisory services: The State Library Board provides consultative and advisory services to librarians, library staffs, library boards, county delegations, city councils, library associations, and the public in general on all aspects of public library service. This service is important in improving local public library programs as well as the overall state program. These services include advice on library government and finance, salary schedules, staff regulations, budget allocations, circulation systems, the maintenance of a useful book collection, book selection, library equipment and supplies, and planning new library buildings.

Promotion, organization, and extension: The State Library Board gives assistance to public library boards and lay groups interested in the extension and improvement of existing library service or the establishment of such service where it does not now exist. It gives leadership in the organization of larger systems of library service such as county or regional systems. It promotes the increased use of existing public libraries through sponsorship of special programs for adults and children.

Library standards: The State Library Board encourages the development of standards of library service to insure the state and the local community of the best possible public library service from the funds available. These library standards cover among others the quality of the book collection, the hours of service, the training and education of library staff, administrative procedures, and services.

Publications: The State Library Board prepares and issues a monthly news letter for public librarians and library trustees. It also prepares and publishes book lists, guidance manuals, reports, and news releases designed to inform the public and the librarians and trustees of the public libraries of the state.

Statistical compilations: The State Library Board assembles and compiles for librarians and governing officials statistical data on public libraries and their use. The data provided includes extent of service, public library income, expenditures, use, and growth of book collection.

Personnel placement: The State Library Board serves as the unofficial placement agency for library personnel in the state. Individuals seeking library employment register with the State Library Board; and in turn, upon request, recommendations of qualified employees are submitted to head librarians and boards of library trustees who are considering filling vacancies.

Administration of federal aid: The State Library Board is charged with the administration of federal grants under the Library Services Act and with the planning of the state-wide program to be carried out under the terms of the Act.

Institutes and workshops: The State Library Board sponsors and organizes institutes and workshops for librarians within the state. These are designed to assist the graduate librarian as well as library employees with limited professional training.

Library cooperation and coordination: The State Library Board strives to bring about cooperation between existing libraries in the interest of economy and efficiency. The elimination of unnecessary duplication of services through the establishment of unified library systems has achieved a higher level of public library service for many areas of the state.

Reference and Interlibrary Loan Service: The State Library Board has developed an extensive collection of reference and general factual material. Books from this collection are made available to any public library in the state which needs them to serve their borrowers more effectively. Through the use of this collection and the services of the Reference Consultant, local public libraries can fill many difficult reference requests. In effect, this collection makes available to all public libraries in the state the resources of a large general reference library.

Legislation: The State Library Board sponsors legislation to improve public library service within the state both at state and local level.

PUBLIC LIBRARY SERVICE IN SOUTH CAROLINA

South Carolina has reason to be proud of its present system of county and regional libraries which now serve all but six of the state's forty-six counties. South Carolinians have been interested in books, reading, and libraries since the early days of the colony. Recorded in the Journals of the Commons House of Assembly of South Carolina during two sessions in 1698 are numerous mentions of public libraries, among them the appropriation of fifty-three pounds to be paid in London for "books belonging to ye Library of Charles Towne in Carolina." In November 1698, Jonathan Amory was ordered to "lay out in Drest Skinns to ye value of Seventy Pounds Currant Money... for ye payment of fifty-three pounds ye due on a Public Library... the surplus to be Lay out in such books for ye Public Library that are not allready Mentioned in the Catalogue of ye said Library." The books so purchased were not only available in the city of Charles Towne but carried to the very frontier itself in the saddle bags of itinerant ministers. Today the saddle bags have been replaced by bookmobiles which carry books and reading materials into remote sections and isolated communities in forty counties. The bookmobiles are but one part of the general public library program which includes county library headquarters, regional library headquarters, branch libraries, and book stations. The whole state public library system is coordinated by the South Carolina State Library Board whose many services supplement the resources and services of the local public library.

During the past year, South Carolinians read 5,542,358 books from their public libraries. This amounts to slightly over two and a half books per capita. Since the total book stock of public libraries is only 1,735,241—or slightly over three-fourths book per capita—it is apparent that South Carolinians are making an intensive use of their public library resources—with every book available to them borrowed at least five times during the year. There are still 444,138 South Carolinians who have no public library service available to them. These are largely rural Negroes and the citizens of the six counties which have not yet established county-wide library service. Of these six counties, Chesterfield County made an intensive effort to establish county-wide service in 1960, but failed to do so by failure of a referendum.

IS PRESENT PUBLIC LIBRARY SERVICE ADEQUATE?

The public library system in South Carolina is basically a very sound one. It has a strong legal foundation in the laws of the state allowing for the establishment of county and regional library systems as well as municipal and township libraries and providing at the state level a strong library extension agency in the State Library Board to plan, direct, and give some regulatory influence to the development of public libraries throughout the state. The extent of public library service is good, but the quality of service is not of uniform excellence. The level of the service given by the local public library depends largely upon the financial support given it by the area it serves and by the amount of State Aid available for the purchase of books. Local support has been increased annually, but State Aid has remained the same, $1,500 per county library, for the last ten years. No public library in the state has achieved state or national standards of service, but all are moving in that direction. Each year some gains are made, and if public library income keeps pace with the increasing prosperity of the state, it should not be long before a certain standard of good public library service is available in every county in the state. With the adequate personnel and the adequate book stock which increased financial support will make possible, libraries in the state will be able to achieve their full potential of service to the people and become what they are designed to be, the centers of information, continuing education, recreation, and inspiration.

STATE AID PROGRAM

Although the amount of State Aid available to county and regional libraries has never been large in South Carolina, it has been instrumental in the extension and improvement of public library service in the state. At present, county libraries and county libraries which are members of regional library systems can qualify for $1,500 each in State Aid funds. Usually State Aid funds are spent for the purchase of books. During the year all but six counties participated in the State Aid Program. Each county which participates must meet certain definite standards of local support and of service before State Aid grants are made. In no case does the state's participation in the local library program exceed one-fourth of the total library budget.

COMMUNITY BOOK DEPOSITS

For over fifteen years the State Library Board has supplemented the book collections of the small public libraries located in those counties which have not yet been able to establish county-wide library service. This service has fostered an interest in public library service which has resulted in the establishment of county-wide library service in all but six counties. At present the service is being given to six municipal libraries and two state institutions. The service consists of book deposits varying in size from 100 to 1000 volumes depending on the size of the community and the use of the books. A professional librarian from the staff of the State Library Board visits these deposits every three months with a well-stocked bookmobile. Books are selected by the local librarian and interested patrons. This frequent exchange of books insures a great variety of titles to the people of the community. Communities using this service are:

Bamberg County—Bamberg
 Beaufort County—St. Helena Island
 Chesterfield County—Cheraw, McBee, Pageland, Chesterfield
 Clarendon County—Manning
 McCormick County—McCormick
 Williamsburg County—Kingstree

State institutions using this service:

Industrial School for Boys
 Summer Orthopedic Camp for Children.

INTERLIBRARY LOAN SERVICE

The Reference and Interlibrary Loan Service was established in 1957 with funds available to the State Library Board under the Library Services Act. The service includes the provision of personnel, books, and services to the public libraries of the state which will insure a better quality of reference service to the people of the state. The book collection which is being established will be the largest general collection in the state. It already includes books and materials which have never before been available in South Carolina. These materials include the indexes for technical and business periodicals and the periodicals themselves on microfilm. The collection is in charge of a fully qualified reference librarian whose responsibility it is to fill the requests of local public libraries for special books and for reference service. The Interlibrary Loan Service as well as the Reference Service receive constant and heavy use by all libraries in the state. During the past year over 5,000 interlibrary loan transactions were completed and information furnished to answer requests for information on approximately 1,000 reference requests.

This sign displayed in every public library in the state calls the library patron's attention to the larger library resources available to him through the State Library Board.

The service is of particular value to the small businessman and to the administrative staffs of new industry coming into the state.

With the encouragement of the State Library Board, several county and regional libraries have established business reference service or have improved this service where already established. Not all public libraries can afford on their limited income to establish business reference service, but all have available to them the extensive resources of the State Library Board in this field.

1960 WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON CHILDREN AND YOUTH

South Carolina's public libraries together with other agencies whose programs affect children and youth were surveyed by the South Carolina Committee on the Welfare of Children and Youth in preparation for the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth. Based on the survey, the following recommendations for public library service were made by the South Carolina Committee:

1. Provision be made for the development of larger systems of public library service through the establishment of regional libraries to make possible the provision of more books, children's specialists, and additional services to children and youth.
2. The public library service be extended to unserved areas and groups.
3. Local, county, state, and national levels continue to give support to public library service.

HOME DEMONSTRATION READING CLUBS

As a part of its general adult program, the State Library Board co-sponsors with the Agricultural Extension Service reading clubs for Home Demonstration groups. The clubs are planned to introduce rural women to the wealth of factual and informational material available through their county and regional libraries. These clubs were in operation during the year in 25 counties. Approximately 4,000 women participated in the clubs and 146 won special recognition for completing the required reading course.

LIBRARY PROGRESS DURING THE YEAR

Under the Library Services Act program, the South Carolina State Library Board received $127,918 from the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for the extension and improvement of public library service in rural areas. (A report of this program will be found at the close of the annual report.)

The following county libraries were legally established by acts of the legislature: Jasper County Library, Hampton County Library, Chesterfield County Library, and the Lancaster County Library.

Work neared completion on the new county library headquarters for the Charleston County Library in Charleston and on the Spartanburg headquarters building in Spartanburg.

Mr. R. H. Smith donated $20,000 for the construction of a library building to serve Cayce and West Columbia. This will become a branch of the Lexington County Library.

Good reading all summer for members of the summer reading program sponsored by the State Library Board and the public libraries of the state.

Large, modern walk-in type bookmobiles were purchased and put into operation in the following counties: Anderson, Pickens, Laurens, Charleston, and Cherokee.

LIBRARY SERVICES ACT

Under the Library Services Act additional financial support is provided to state library extension agencies for the development of rural library service. Funds are granted to each state on the basis of a plan for the use of federal funds developed by the state library extension agency. The amount of funds granted the state is determined by the ratio of the state's rural population and per capita income to the national average. A state is automatically disqualified for a grant of funds under the act if the appropriation for the library extension agency falls below that made for the year 1956.

THE PLAN

The South Carolina plan for the implementation of the provisions of the Library Services Act within the State is aimed at the correction of the major deficiencies in public library service in the State. These deficiencies are deemed to be an inadequate State level program, inadequate reference service from State and local levels, an inadequate supply of professionally trained librarians, and units of library administration too small to provide adequate service as measured against state and national standards.

THE LSA PROGRAM IN 1960

Expansion of the Services of the State Library Board:

The expansion of the services which the State Library Board is able to offer has had a significant effect on the quality of service available from all public libraries of the state. The improvement of field service has resulted in the adoption of more efficient methods of operation by many libraries and a better understanding of the role of the library in the community.

The State Library board has itself conducted a self-study in preparation for a reorganization designed to achieve greater efficiency and to form the basis for an even greater expansion of service. This reorganization has now been effected with the agency organized into three major divisions—Technical Services, Field Services, and Readers' Services.

The Reference and Interlibrary Loan Service is the most widely used and generally appreciated service of the Board. Over five thousand reference and interlibrary loan transactions were completed during the year involving some service to every public library in the state. In order to help the local librarian make the best use of local resources and the supplementary resources of the State Library Board, six workshops were held in six regions of the state by the Reference Consultant with the assistance of the Field Service Librarian.

The book collection which is basic to the reference and interlibrary loan service continues to grow both in quantity and quality. During the year, 5,811 titles were added. Continued progress has been made in consolidating the old collection with the new. 9,026 books have been cataloged, and 3,215 have been recataloged.

As a further step in the improvement of reference resources at the local level, preliminary work on the Carolina Materials Project was completed. With the assistance of the State Archivist, the librarians of the Caroliniana Library, The Charleston Library Society, an historian and two public librarians well versed in this field, a list of essential books in South Carolina history was compiled. Rare and out-of-print materials, these books which are available only at a premium price in the rare books market, will be reproduced by the Zerox process and a set supplied to one library in each of the state's six Congressional Districts through a project which the State Library Board proposes to conduct in 1961.

For the first time since the initiation of the State Plan, it has been possible to realize a program for the improvement of services to children and youth. On the 1st of July, a Consultant for Children and Youth was added to the staff and improvement and expansion of service to this large group was immediately apparent. A first step was the compilation of the results of the library section of the state survey of conditions affecting children and youth conducted in preparation for the 1960 White House Conference by the State Committee on the Welfare of Children and Youth. A report and recommendations based on the survey became one of the major sections of the S. C. Committee's report. The Consultant prepared a bibliography of books designed to achieve goals set by the S. C. White House Committee. The bibliography was printed and distributed widely throughout the state and later was given national distribution by the national White House Committee. Plans were made for a state-wide vacation reading club designed to demonstrate a reading program in balance with other summer activities of children and to emphasize the heritage of South Carolina in the history of the nation. Many state and local agencies were involved in the program with local historical societies assuming a major responsibility for introducing children and young people to sites and personalities of historic significance in their own communities. Over eleven thousand young South Carolinians have joined this club which is being conducted by public libraries throughout the state. In addition to these programs, the Consultant has contacted many groups working with children and youth and has plans in preparation for cooperative projects with both the Girl Scouts and the 4-H clubs.

College juniors and seniors who won Junior Internships for summer work in public libraries learn what a public library is and what it does.

Personnel Project: Provision of adequately trained professional public librarians:

The Senior Intern program, a detailed account of which has been given in the previous reports, is continuing at the same level. At present the following libraries and young people are engaged in the program: Charleston County Library—Rachael Ellis—Emory; Greenville Public Library—Charles Busha—Rutgers; Horry County Library—Hilda McKiever—Atlanta University; Pickens County Library—Mary Aiken—Florida; Anderson County Library—Ann Frances Blackmon—Florida.

The Junior Intern Program, initiated this year with three pilot projects, has developed into a major and persuasive recruiting device. Through this program qualified young people are given an introduction to the profession of librarianship through experience in actually working in a public library. Following the successful conclusion of the pilot projects, a committee of public librarians was appointed to work with the State Library Board in developing the project. A planning meeting was held in Columbia at which time specific plans were worked out for contacting qualified recruits. Applications were approved for participation in the project from ten libraries on the basis of the type of experience provided and the quality of supervision available. All ten Junior Internships have been filled with young persons whose academic background, personality, and interest warrant the conclusion that they are likely prospects for the profession.

County Library Project: Improvement of public library service to rural residents in counties in which more than one library system is maintained:

The second year of the County Library Project in Anderson County has been an interesting one. Following the evaluation made at the close of the first year of the project, a series of conferences was held with the staff in Anderson to work out the problems of administration. One new branch library in Williamston has been established and a second bookmobile put into operation. At the close of the year, a second evaluation of the project was made by Mrs. Gretchen Knief Schenk, a recognized authority in the field of library extension. Based upon her findings and the recommendation of the field staff of the State Library Board, some additional changes were made. The Anderson County Library bids fair to be one of the outstanding libraries in South Carolina from the standpoint of organization and the provision of a good level of public library service over the entire area.

Greenville County has been engaged in an all out campaign to establish a new library system which will incorporate the present city and county library into a new system to serve the entire county. At present the county contracts with the city for service, but two different boards are responsible for the service. The new system must be legally established before the county can qualify for participation in Project III.

Chesterfield County made an all out effort to establish county library service and qualify for a grant under Project III. The campaign grew out of the findings made in the White House Conference survey of conditions affecting children and youth. A county-wide committee did everything possible to prepare for a project. Legislation was enacted establishing a county library contingent upon the success of a referendum to authorize a 3 mill tax. The referendum failed of passage in the June election.

Regional Library Project: The Aiken-Barnwell-Edgefield Regional Library, now in its second year of operation, is an unqualified success. This is a regional library organized under one board, with all funds included in one budget, with one staff, one policy, and one major objective—to make public library service a contributing factor to both the cultural and economic welfare of the three counties. The progress made in achieving this goal is phenomenal. The extent of service is excellent with county headquarters in each county seat, supported by a network of branches in the major communities, and bookmobile service in the smaller communities and sparsely settled rural areas. It is impressive to see the quality of service achieved in so short a time and the enthusiasm with which this service is used by the people of the entire area.

The State Library Board's staff put its major effort during the year into the ground work for a regional library to serve five counties—Allendale, Beaufort, Colleton, Hampton, and Jasper. This is a region of some 112,000 people located in coastal Carolina and now served by one good county library and a long established three-county regional library.

In Conclusion:

It is difficult to look at a program and judge how much has been accomplished through careful planning and persistent effort and how much is the result of what seems to be an increasing tide of interest in public library service. There can be no question that the impressive allocation of funds under the Library Services Act has contributed to a public awareness of the value of the service in the total educational program. The fact that the federal government believes in the necessity of public library service as a safeguard to democratic government and is backing the belief with hard cash, has been convincing proof to many local appropriation bodies of a necessity for more local funds for the same purpose. Throughout the state, local appropriations have been increased and funds have been made available for building programs and for improved rolling equipment.

One direct result of the State Library Board's efforts to improve reference service at both state and local level is an increasing awareness among the people of the state of what is available through books. It is not an exaggeration to say that prior to this program, the public's image of a "book" was either a text or a novel. It would be quixotic to say that this image has entirely changed, but thousands of people now take for granted that anything is available through books. It is a challenge for both local and state libraries to warrant this trust.

In aiming at the achievement of ALA standards in South Carolina, we have fully realized the magnitude of the task ahead. Since circumstances do not adjust to meet standards, some adjustment of standards to meet circumstances has been necessary. What encourages us to believe that we have not aimed too high is the almost blatant evidence that circumstances in the state are changing at a rapid rate. New industry, new plants, new super highways, new ports, new methods in agriculture, and new people leave little room for magnolias and moonlight. The old leisurely way of life is going. The new high pressured way may not be as comfortable as the old, but it is solving many of the persistent problems which have stood in the way of the state's progress in the past.

SURVEY OF SALARIES PAID IN SOUTH CAROLINA PUBLIC LIBRARIES 1958-59

The survey is based on the results of questionnaires mailed to the heads of South Carolina public libraries during the winter of 1958-59. Fifty-three questionnaires were sent and fifty answers received. The libraries that failed to reply were the Beaufort Township Library, The Marion County Library, and the Richland County Public Library.

For purposes of tabulation and comparison the libraries included in the survey have been grouped according to the population of their service areas. These groupings are the same as those used in the South Carolina Public Library Personnel Manual which recommends salary schedules for public library positions, both professional and non-professional.

Again to facilitate comparison, salaries paid for part-time work have been converted to a full-time rate, on the basis of a 40-hour week. As a result, all salaries shown are for full-time work although only 157 of the 295 positions reported in the survey are actually full-time jobs.

All head librarians have been counted as professional employees, regardless of their educational qualifications. For other positions, only those persons with graduate degrees in library science have been considered professional.
